

Cooper and Aiden Schmidt

Aggies

OR

A fun, Katyized look at this

For more than a century, the football rivalry between the Texas A&M Aggies and University of Texas Longhorns has brewed strong in the state of Texas. In the friendly neighborhoods of Katy, admirers of the collie Reveille and the steer Bevo coexist peacefully throughout most

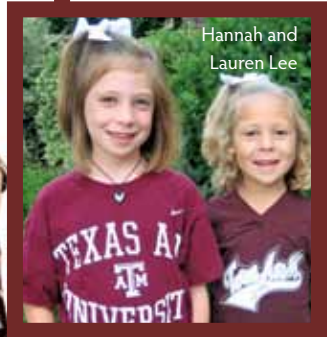

Beckham Smith

“The thing we most enjoy about the Aggie-Longhorn rivalry is the crowd of people it attracts. There is such spirit from both schools in one field.”

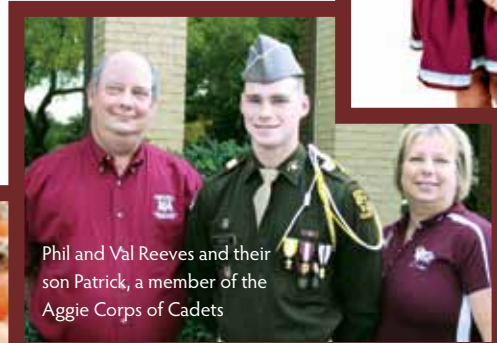

- LaVonne Schoeneberg

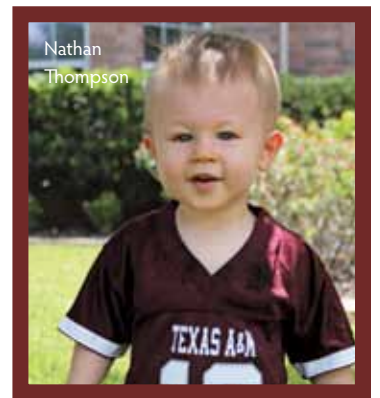

Ashlyn Schoeneberg and Mackenzie Matthews

Hannah and Lauren Lee

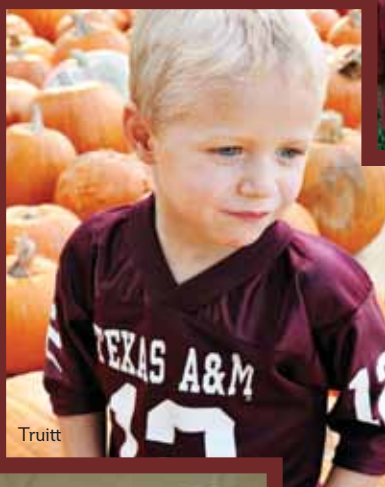

Phil and Val Reeves and their son Patrick, a member of the Aggie Corps of Cadets

Nathan Thompson

“My cuties are both Aggie fans and show their spirit by watching games with daddy and wearing Aggie gear!”

- Jodi Schmidt

Truitt

Noah Edmiston

James

AGGIELAND

In Aggieland, the Gig ‘Em sign and “howdy” are common greetings around every corner, while fans fill the air with the “Aggie War Hymn” during games. Traditions like the midnight yell, corps of cadets, and 12th man are near and dear to every Aggie’s heart.

LONGHORNS?

longstanding Texas rivalry

of the year, until those fall football banners wave! Then, the rivalry begins to heat up, bringing the excitement of time-honored traditions and college pride to the forefront of the football season.

Alaina and Breanna Rowan

Ryan and Quinn Clanahan

Photo by April Pizana

Jennifer and Marc Koepplinger and their children Anthony, Evan, and Riley

Joshua Medina

Sammy Dimiceli

Jolene Rowan

Reese Banister and Sammy Dimiceli

“We enjoy watching college ball together... We love the marching band!”
 - Katy mom Jessica Rowan, whose daughters Alaina, Breanna, and Jolene are all football fans

“UT is an awesome school, in addition to being top 10 in sports... The thing I most enjoy about the Aggie-Longhorn rivalry is in the end, we are all Texans!”
 - Kristen Dimiceli

UT PRIDE

In Longhorn country, expect to see students making the Hook ‘Em sign and singing along to “The Eyes of Texas.” During games, traditions like Smokey the Cannon, the “Texas Fight” song, and Big Bertha – at one time the world’s largest drum – take center stage.

Camille and her dog Sophie and Tiffany and her dog Bella

UT cheerleaders Holly and Hillary

Don't miss the Aggie-Longhorn football showdown on Nov. 24 at 7 p.m.