What You and Your Child Need to Know Before Starting Kindergarten

The first thing most new parents do when they have a baby is gaze in awe at their beautiful bundle of joy. Soon this awe is transformed into thoughts of what the future holds for their precious baby. By the time a child begins walking, talking, and asking questions, many parents have already started thinking about early educational opportunities available to their child. But many parents are left wondering how soon is too soon to begin organized learning for a young child?

While the trend of Pre-K as a necessity for entering Kindergarten seems to be a fairly recent idea, sending a child to some type of preschool program is usually the norm rather than the exception. What are the differences between these two programs and how important is it to provide your child with early learning opportunities?

The Benefits of Preschool

“A preschool program enhances a child’s opportunities for social, emotional, physical and academic development,” explains Lou Ann McLaughlin, M.Ed., Owner of Primrose Schools of Cinco Ranch, Kelliwood, North Mason Creek, Copperfield, and Eldridge Parkway. “Often when we think about what children learn in preschool, things such as the teaching of colors, shapes and other basic knowledge tidbits come to mind. To put a preschool program in proper perspective, one must go beyond that.”

Gina and Alyssa learn to build great friendships

Pre-K Versus Preschool

Steve Sandweiss, owner of A Child’s Reflection says their Pre-K program actually partners with Katy ISD’s PPCD early childhood program. Sandweiss says their teachers obtain an “in-depth knowledge of Katy ISD’s early childhood and kindergarten curriculum, and its programs and expectations.” Designed specifically with the Kindergartener in mind, this type of program may be a good fit for your future Katy kindergartener. But preschool programs are also good options for parents. Preschools are sometimes more play-based and may be less focused on academics and kindergarten readiness, but they do help tremendously with teaching children social skills and routines.

Rylee, Alyssa and Gina work on puzzles together.

Adjusting to Routines and Structure

A typical kindergartener in Katy will have to learn a lot about structure and routine. Things like waiting his turn, raising his hand or following simple instructions from the teacher can be even more beneficial than already knowing his ABCs and the 123s. According to McLaughlin, who has fifteen years of experience in preschool education, a kindergarten classroom may be problematic for children who have had no daily routines or group experiences. She reinforces that a good preschool program provides a balance of structure and self direction, enhancing a young child’s skills and self-esteem.

Developing Social Skills

“Even more important than the academic advantage the preschool provides, the development of social skills during the preschool and pre-kindergarten years is a crucial element of success in kindergarten,” agrees Sandweiss. “This is not only the peer-to-peer experience of learning to share and play in groups, but preschool provides an opportunity for children to gain respect for authority (teachers) and provides order (daily schedules and routines) that is expected from the first day of kindergarten,”

What to Look For?

So, if you have made the decision to enroll your child in a preschool program, what should you look for in a preschool? Sandweiss recommends looking for experienced, loving teachers that create an environment where the children want to attend school each day. While kids are learning, they also love to play, so he suggests parents find a balanced schedule with a lot of variety split between developing the basic skills necessary for kindergarten and center based play time. Overall, he says that it is wise to trust your first impressions as an accurate indicator of how the school is run. Parents seem to have unique instincts about the places they send their children, and preschool is certainly no exception.

So the question remains, while preschool has distinct benefits, is Pre-K a prerequisite for Kindergarten in Katy? The answer to

PRE-K or PRESCHOOL... WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE?

PRE-K

Usually associated with the K-12 school system and is clearly defined as a significant year or two of learning that provides three- and four-year-old children with the skills necessary to succeed in kindergarten.

PRESCHOOL

A broad, general term used to refer to a variety of early care and education programs including pre-k, childcare, nursery school, and even "mothers-day-out" programs which serve children of various ages on numerous possible schedules.

that question depends on you. As a parent, it is ultimately your decision whether you feel your child has the skills necessary to take that first small step into the Kindergarten classroom and a giant leap into their future. If not, or if you simply want to give them a chance to start developing those social skills prior to Kindergarten, a good Pre-K or preschool program may be for you. ★

10 Signs of a Great Preschool

Experts recommend looking for these signs of a good preschool program

- 1 Children spend most of their time playing and working with materials or other children. They do not wander aimlessly, and they are not expected to sit quietly for long periods of time.
- 2 Children have access to various activities throughout the day. Look for assorted building blocks and other construction materials, props for pretend play, picture books, paints and other art materials, and table toys such as matching games, pegboards, and puzzles. Children should not all be doing the same thing at the same time.
- 3 Teachers work with individual children, small groups, and the whole group at different times during the day. They do not spend all their time with the whole group.
- 4 The classroom is decorated with children's original artwork, their own writing with invented spelling, and stories dictated by children to teachers.
- 5 Children learn numbers and the alphabet in the context of their everyday experiences. The natural world of plants and animals and meaningful activities like cooking, taking attendance, or serving snack provide the basis for learning activities.
- 6 Children work on projects and have long periods of time (at least one hour) to play and explore. Worksheets are used little if at all.
- 7 Children have an opportunity to play outside every day. Outdoor play is never sacrificed for more instructional time.
- 8 Teachers read books to children individually or in small groups throughout the day, not just at group story time.
- 9 Curriculum is adapted for those who are ahead as well as those who need additional help. Teachers recognize that children's different background and experiences mean that they do not learn the same things at the same time in the same way.
- 10 Children and their parents look forward to school. Parents feel secure about sending their child to the program. Children are happy to attend; they do not cry regularly or complain of feeling sick.

KATY'S TOP MODEL

Annamary Johnson prepares for the runway

Memorial Parkway Elementary School Teacher Struts Her Stuff at Jones New York Fashion Show

Annamary Johnson, a history teacher at Memorial Parkway Elementary was recently selected to represent Katy during Jones New York's Shop for Education Week. The non-profit arm of the nationally-recognized clothier - JNY in the Classroom - teamed up with Macy's in hosting "Teacher Runway Shows" throughout the country. Johnson is one of nine Houston-area teachers who strutted down the catwalk and modeled the latest fall looks from Jones New York.

Beauty and Brains

Johnson was selected as a model for the event in part because of her status as a Fund for Teachers grant winner. Fund for Teachers (FFT) is a Houston-based non-profit whose mission is to enrich the lives of school teachers and students throughout the U.S. by providing outstanding teachers with recognition and opportunities to pursue independent studies over the summer. FFT is a beneficiary of the funds donated through the JNY in the Classroom initiative.

Annamary struts her stuff

For her FFT Grant, Johnson joined three other teachers from Memorial Parkway Elementary on a tour of the U.S. East Coast, making stops in New York, Philadelphia, Jamestown and other cities of historical importance. The three other teachers were Heather Schuren, Debra Lang, and Erika Meneghetti. Together, the group collected information, photos and artifacts to help bring U.S. History to life for their young students here in Katy, Texas.
